BEVERLEY BULB AND DAHLIA FARMS

CHOICE DAHLIAS AND BULBS

We cannot think of any flower which fulfills so many of the desirable qualities sought after and actually found in the Dahlia. A few of these qualities are: Its willingness to grow under varying conditions of soil and climate. Very few, if any, plants exceed it in length of blooming season. None produces as many blooms on a single plant, in as many different forms, or as great a variety of color or combination of colors in one flower. AND SIZE: Ranging from the one-inch Pompon to the giant Exhibition Dahlias of 15 inches or more. And did you know that individual new varieties may be grown from seed, and flower profusely in one season.

We are located in the heart of the White River Valley approximately 18 miles from the business center of Seattle and its temperate salt air and flanked on the southwest by the Cascade range and majestic Mount Rainier which seems to be watching over our activities. This valley is one of the most productive in the world, famous for its bulbs, berries and truck garden crops.

In shipping you nothing but the choicest and healthiest of Dahlias and bulbs we hope to achieve mutual success as flower growers. We welcome visitors at all times to our gardens.

Our Nurseries are located in the heart of the productive Kent Valley. Going south from Seattle follow the West Valley Highway, also known as Old Tacoma Highway, through Renton Junction and Orilla to O'Brien Corner, turn west three-quarters of a mile, then south one mile, on east side of Green River.

General Information

(Please Read Carefully Before Placing Order)

PLEASE ORDER EARLY—Be sure to state in your order approximate date you wish shipment to be made. We do not advise shipment of Dahlia roots east of the Pacific slope before proper planting time in your area because of the possibility of damage from freezing in transit. However, should you desire shipment prior to April 1 we will pack as frost proof as possible and ship Express at purchaser's risk and expense.

SUBSTITUTIONS—May we suggest that you allow us to substitute varieties of the same general color and of greater value in the event that shortages exist in some varieties. Please indicate YES or NO in your order.

TERMS—Due to increased transportation costs we would rather not accept orders for prepaid postage for less than $3.00. Less than this amount please add 10% to your remittance. Terms: Cash is required with order. Please, no C.O.D. orders accepted. They are most costly for both of us. Please remit by check, money order, or cash by registered mail only. Washington residents—be sure to include sales tax with your remittance.

DISCOUNTS—Due to the high cost of transportation and possibility of going even higher, we have discontinued giving discounts, allowing us to maintain our reasonable prices on stock and lowering them on a number of varieties, and still prepay shipments at retail.

GUARANTEE—All stock shipped by us is guaranteed to be true to name, healthy and in good growing condition upon arrival at destination. Stock not meeting these conditions will be replaced if returned to us within three weeks after arrival. Since we cannot control conditions under which stock, once sold, is planted and grown, our responsibility is limited to replacement or refunding of purchase price of merchandise returned.

Dahlia roots only are listed for sale in this catalog. This underground reproductive growth of the Dahlia is quite often referred to by the public as bulbs, or tubers; however, they are actually roots, the term used almost universally in the trade. Any reference made to salable Dahlia stock in this catalog means a division of the root system of the Dahlia plant.

LOCATION—Our Nurseries are located in the heart of the productive Kent Valley. Going south from Seattle, follow the West Valley Highway, also known as Old Tacoma Highway, through Renton Junction and Orilla to O'Brien Corner, turn west three-quarters of a mile then south one mile, on east side of Green River.

IMPORTANT

We are very sincere in desiring that you get the very best results from growing our Dahlia stock, which is thoroughly inspected and each root guaranteed to have at least one live eye when leaving our hands. In order to establish friendly relations and hold your confidence we would like to make the following suggestions on how to handle your order when it is received: Open the parcel as soon as received to check for any damage or deterioration in transit. For best results they should be planted immediately, if practical, considering weather conditions, etc. If impossible to plant when received better leave them in storage medium in which they were shipped and be careful not to put them in too hot or dry a place where they are likely to shrivel and dry up—or the other extreme, too cold and damp, the possibility of freezing or absorbing a fungus condition which leads to rot. We do not advise soaking in water or too wet a medium of any kind to force the eye into sprouting; this only leads to trouble. Finally, check your soil for wire worms and cut worms; a wire worm can eat the eye right out of the tuber, eliminating any possibility of producing a plant. Consult your garden insecticide dealer for one of the new products which contains benzene hexachloride and use as directed for a control of wire worms and other pests living in the soil.

Dahlia Culture

For the healthy growth and the lovely blooms your Dahlia planting should be expected to produce, just a few simple requirements are demanded. These are easy to understand and follow when we consider the manner in which the Dahlia plant grows.

The root division which we plant has an eye near or on the part of the stalk which forms the top of the root. This eye contains the really important part of the entire root, and from it a stalk and feed roots grow to form the Dahlia plant.

Mrs. Geo. Pezant—Incurved Cactus

The rest of the root is merely a dinner basket to supply necessary nourishment for starting the new plant. As soon as the feed roots, very fine at first, reach the point where they start to supply enough plant food to enable the newly-formed leave above ground to begin to work, the original root has performed its purpose and may as well be disregarded. In proof of this, the root you plant may be cut in half or a still smaller portion be planted with a resultant vigorous plant, providing the conditions of soil and moisture, etc., are made right.

Thus the new plant needs nothing in the way of fertilizer or irrigation until the new feed roots are established. And the more numerous and faster-growing these feed roots, the stronger the plant and the better the crop of roots for the next year. Any fertilizer should for this reason,, not be placed in the hole in which the root is planted, but spread over the entire Dahlia plot, as the new roots will cover in most cases the entire space allotted to your Dahlias.

Some of these new roots will thicken and begin to store up starch and other food elements, forming the new crop of storage roots. It is when these are growing and the buds on the plant are beginning to open that plenty of plant food and water are necessary. It is known that one bloom in its formation requires many times the water and food that is needed for the foliage and stalk growth.

It is clear anything which tends to interfere with the growth of these new feed roots will stunt the growth of the plant, so an over-supply of water at the start, or the presence of rotting vegetation or manure, anything which will cause these roots to rot before they reach a healthy growth, is to be avoided. Plenty of room is needed for root development and space between plants should be enough for good ventilation to avoid mildew of the foliage.

With an understanding of these requirements, we can plan the best way to plant and care for the Dahlias. The soil should be loose and well drained. Spading deeply as soon as the ground can be worked in the spring is a necessary part of the preparation. On heavy clay soil some sort of humus should be worked in, and some sand or fine coal ashes. If new clay, a dressing of agricultural lime raked in the surface after spading will be of advantage. If the ground has been planted to a root crop the year before an application of bone meal and potash should be made, and this worked into the surface before planting. About five pounds of bone meal and one pound of muriate or sulphate of potash to every ten plants.

When the soil has warmed up nicely, and not until then, is the time to plant. Do not plant a Dahlia root in cold, wet ground, and expect anything but failure. Some varieties may pull through, but nothing is gained by planting too early. A hole about five inches deep in heavy soil, to as deep as eight inches in light, sandy soil, is dug for each root, and allow at least three feet each way between holes. This for the large varieties. The Pompons may be spaced closer, also the miniatures for mass effects. A stake should be driven close to the hole and the root laid therein with the eye or sprout facing up, and toward the stake. The root should be covered about two inches, and the hole gradually filled in as the plant grows. It may be tied to the stake with soft twine or rag to avoid cutting the stalk.

For a bushy plant with numerous blooms the plant may be pinched out after the third set of leaves forms. This will force the buds at the base of the plant to develop and the plant will spread out. For large blooms, pinch out the buds on each branch down to the base buds, leaving only one bud to a stalk. This allows long stems for cutting or exhibition. As Pompons and Miniatures are somewhat valued in inverse ratio to their size, none of these should be disbudded, but the young plant may be pinched out to make more blooms.

There are a few insect pests which may infect your Dahlias, depending on your locality. Aphis or other sucking insects, or leaf hoppers or other chewing insects. There are a number of good sprays and dusts on the market, including

Sainte Therese—Straight Cactus

DDT which may be used according to directions on the package. Your local feed store or hardware dealer will help you select whichever is indicated by your local conditions.

The ground around the Dahlia plants should be kept in a loose condition by frequent cultivation, deep at first and then shallower as the plant grows and the feed roots spread out, and near the surface. If your summer is very hot, a mulch between the Dahlias of grass clippings, or other material, will help keep the ground cool and avoid overheating the roots. During extreme heat it is advisable to pick off the buds and not allow blossoms to form, thus saving any possible dangerous wilting of the plant.

When watering, after the buds have started to open, and not until then, it is better to give the ground a thorough soaking once a week or every ten days, than to sprinkle the surface every day. The moisture should reach down about a foot to be of the most value.

Dahlia blooms should be cut either early in the morning before the sun starts to dry them out, or late in the evening. The best method of cutting for long keeping blooms, is to carry a bucket of cold water into the garden and plunge the stem of the Dahlia into it as soon as it is cut from the bush. A knife should be used instead of scissors, as the object is not to press the stem shut, but rather leave it so that it will absorb water readily for the bloom. The cut flowers should then be placed in the cold water container, in a cool darkplace, and away from any drafts, for several hours, or if cut in the evening, over night. After that they are ready for placing in your vase or other containers for display, and will keep much longer than if any other method of preparation is used. Too much foliage left on the stem will greatly lessen the keeping quality of the bloom.

After the first killing frost the Dahlia clumps should be dug and stored for the winter. In sections where there is no frost, or where it comes very late in the year, the plants may be cut down any time and after allowing a few days for the sap to go down into the roots, the clumps may be dug and cared for the same as if they had been killed by frost. It is well to dig the dirt away from the clump and cut down with the spade all around it rather deep before lifting it out. This will cut the feed roots which may extend out as far as two feet from the stalk, and which might break some of the roots from the stalk if not cut. Any roots which are broken at the neck will probably not be any good the following spring.

The clump may be allowed to stand for a while to dry out the dirt, which may then be shaken off gently. Or a gentle stream of water may be used to wash the clumps. The stalks should then be cut off close to the clump, and it is then ready to be divided or stored.

A cool, not too dry, cellar is the best place for root storage, being sure it is frost proof. It does not need much below freezing to ruin Dahlia roots. Also dry warm air will cause the roots to dry out and shrivel up, so that most of them will not grow in the spring.

In dividing the clumps, all that is necessary is to have an eye for each root saved, and these eyes are plainly visible at the time of digging, if one wishes to divide them then. This will do away with the possibility of stem rot, which sometimes spoils the entire clumps. Cut surfaces may be dusted or dipped in powdered lime or sulphur and the roots packed in boxes of fine sawdust or even dry dirt. The name of the variety may be written on the root with an indelible pencil, moistening the surface so the writing will be permanent. This avoids the possibility of lost tags and mixed-up varieties.

Any special problems not covered will be gladly considered on request, and all available information thereto will be given.

Miniature Type Dahlias

These small replicas of their big cousins, the Exhibition types, are becoming more popular each year for their diversity of use, wonderful for cutting and arrangements, the ease with which they can be grown and the great quantities of flowers that most of them produce. They are classified for petal formation the same as the large types. Miniature Dahlias are those which normally produce flowers that do not exceed four inches in diameter, not including Pompons, which are classified separately.

Beverley Bulb and Dahlia Farms

A Few Simple Rules for Gladiolus Culture

They do best in full sun and must have at least a half-day when the sun can reach them for best results.

Any good garden soil will grow Glads. Rotted manure is desirable at the bottom of hole with a little dirt between this and the bulb. A side dressing of commercial fertilizer (3-10-10) at planting time is, quite often, very beneficial.

Plant 5 or 6 inches deep, spacing them so they are approximately 4 inches apart in the row.

After the plants have their fourth leaf they should be kept well watered until the florets are open.

Keep well cultivated and weeded, the more the better.

Use a good insecticide spray every two or three weeks from the time the Glads start to grow to control their worst enemy, the Gladiolus thrip. This is important where the pest is prevalent. It is a very good idea to soak bulbs before planting. Soak four hours in a solution of one tablespoonful of Lysol to one gallon of water.

Here's hoping you get as much pleasure out of growing Glads and Dahlias as we do and by providing you with nothing but the highest quality stock, at reasonable prices, that we can continue to supply you with glamorous flowers.

Gladiolus Bulbs

We are offering, with pride, what we consider are the outstanding varieties in each basic color range and reasonably priced for the average home gardener. We know of no better quality Glads grown anywhere than those grown in this, the Puget Sound area of Washington. We are not pricing them according to size as they will be all No. 1 blooming size. Please write for quotations in quantity lots, or, for varieties not listed in this catalog. Same terms and shipping conditions apply as those on Dahlias.
